Using the arguments in this Handbook

We encourage you to be familiar with the briefs you use. Highlight (underline) the key lines you will use in the evidence. Cut out evidence from our briefs, incorporate your and others' research and make new briefs. File the evidence so that you can easily retrieve it when you need it in debate rounds. Practice reading the evidence out-loud; Practice applying the arguments to your opponents' positions; Practice defending your briefs in rebuttal speeches.

Use West Coast Handbooks as a Beginning

We hope you enjoy our handbook and find it useful. In saying this, we want to make a strong statement that we make when we coach and that we believe is vitally important to your success: DO NOT USE THIS HANDBOOK AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR YOUR OWN RESEARCH. Instead, let it serve as a beginning. Let it inform you of important arguments, of how to tag and organize your arguments, and to offer citations for further research. Don't stagnate in briefs--build upon them by doing your own research for updates, new strategies, and arguments that specifically apply to your opponents. In doing so, you'll use our handbook to become a better debater.

Photocopying West Coast Handbooks

Our policy gives you the freedom to use the handbook for educational purposes without violating the hard work that we put into the handbook. You can photocopy this handbook under the following circumstances:

1. You can make multiple copies of up to five pages of each West Coast handbook for a class handout.
2. You can make multiple copies of briefs that include evidence from this handbook as long as these photocopied briefs are significantly different from the ones in this handbook and include a significant number of pieces of evidence from sources other than a West Coast handbook.

You may not electronically share or distribute this handbook with anyone other than those on your team. For other situations, you can e-mail us at wcdebate@aol.com and seek our consent.
